REGULATIONS

To be observed by those who have the Use of the Books in this Collection.

I. THE Library shall be under the immediate direction of a Committee of the Students of Divinity, not exceeding twelve, to be annually chosen by the Students themselves, with the approbation of the Professor; which Committee shall take care, that the Regulations concerning the Library be punctually observed; and make such new regulations, as they shall find necessary, from time to come.

II. The day of election shall be on the first Monday of December: four of the old Committee shall always be re-elected; and the others from the remainder of the Students, not excluding the former members of Committee.

III. A Librarian shall be annually chosen by the Committee, and approved by the Students and Professor, whose duty shall be, To give out, and receive in the books; to take notice of those who transgress the laws; to collect the fines; and to report to the Committee such as prove refractory; and finally, to wait in the Divinity-hall for performing the duties of his office, at such times as shall be found most convenient, from year to year.

IV. Every Student shall have a right to the use of the Library, upon condition that he pay annually Three Shillings sterling, as the minium, for supporting it.

V. Books in Octavo et infra shall be returned in two weeks; Quartos in four weeks; and Folios in six weeks; during the Session: (double time being allowed during the Vacation) and whoever transgresses this rule, shall forfeit, to the use of the Library, One Penny sterling for each night he keeps any book beyond the limited time.

VI. No more than two volumes shall be given out during the Session, and four during the Vacation.

VII. If any person shall keep any book more than two weeks beyond the time above specified, he shall thereby forfeit all right to the use of the Library for that current year; besides the above penalty of One Penny per night; which shall be understood still to run on, till the book be returned.

REGULATIONS.

VIII. If any person abuse any of the books, by tearing, scribbling, or any other way whatever, he shall be liable to a fine, proportioned to the degree of the offence; of which the Committee shall be judges.

IX. If it shall happen, that two or more persons call for the same book, the first demand shall be preferred.

X. Any person who chooses to have a book longer than the time specified, may be allowed that privilege, upon renewing his note for it; provided always, that the book has not been called for by any other person during the time he has had it.

XI. That the Library may be opened as early in the Session as possible, every volume, given out during the Vacation, shall be returned on or before the second Wednesday of November. Any person who shall keep any book more than two weeks beyond the time specified, shall forfeit all right to the use of the Library for that current year; besides the penalty of Two-pence sterling, per night, for every volume; which shall be understood to run on till they are returned.

XII. Whoever pays to the Library, and uses his right in consequence of it, by taking out any volume or volumes, shall be understood, thereby, to have bound himself, to observe these Regulations, under the penalties above-mentioned.

XIII. Whoever shall prove disobedient to the above laws, shall forfeit all right to the use of the Library, till he submit.

XIV. Every Student who shall pay six years, shall ever after be entitled to the use of the Library gratis, he still submitting to the above Regulations.
